were wrung from the Emperor by foreigners virtually at the point of the bayonet, and valuable ground was ceded for certain specific purposes to foreigners solely; but now, having through the influence of the almighty dollar come again under native control, it is but right that the land should contribute its fair proportion to the necessities of the State, and as the model colony of Hongkong is assessed at about twelve per cent per annum, the mandarins, with that liberality of spirit for which they are so distinguished, think a tax of ten per cent, moderation in the extreme. It is impossible not to concede. under the circumstances, that the Chinese Government have reason, if not right, on their side. But the child-like Celestials, not to be out-done in astuteness by their official nulers, have managed cleverly, and by means of fictitious transfers made the representatives of Foreign firms the holders of their lots. Some of the leading foreign firms in Foochow are sald to be parties to this little game—for a consideration which is not one of tea, that product having, as long predicted, become literally a drug in the market. The Chinese authorities assert that the game is a little too thin, and are determined to stick to their guns, and so altogether there is a pretty quarrel brewing at Foochow, and inasmuch as it affects all Foreign Concessions in China, the result will be watched with great interest. Shanghai is most vitally concerned, for nine tenths of the foreign Concession are Chinese-owned, and the Foreigner, to put his actual position in plain English,

(I addressed them in pidgin English and repeated the above several times. that I should not be misunderstood.) About five minutes afterwards they all came trooping aft, armed with clubs, axes, tools, and odd wearons. I met them at the break of the poop and ordered them to go forward. They acted as if demented, singing out "must fight; wantchee fight," and rushed up the ladder on to the poop, on which I picked up a club and sang out to the mate to bring up a rifle. On his recappearance they lowered their weapons; and we drove them forward without striking a blow and they witer paguent, ad valorem upon all property in went below. YESTERDAY a Chinaman tried to elope with somebody else's wife. There is nothing out of the way about that, but the sequel of the little drama was not so conventional. The owner of the wife, with some clansmen, followed them on to the Port Fairy, which was about to sail for Singapore, and, after sending the wife ashore, whacked the individual who was running off with his heart's delight with his umbrella, and repared to take him ashore and have him tried by the clan. A Chinese detective-sergeant, however, arrested the lot, and the injured husband and two of his companions got au months each, at the hands of Mr. Robinson this morning. Hard lines for the hubby.

Inspector William Stanton stated that he had been detailed to inquire into the causes of the fire and was not acquainted with any suspicious circumstances connected with it.

Mr. Wedehouse then stated that he would release the premises, as nothing suspicious had been found connected with the fire, and as the men who had died during the fire and after it, from injuries received, had met their death from accidental causes.

The depositions taken yesterday by Mr. Wodehouse all tended to show that the men tried to escape by the cocklost of the house and get over the roof into the next building, but that in impeding each other in their hurry to escape. owing to the narrowness of the escape-hole, and the rapidity of the fire, few of them succeeded in getting away unscathed.

Two more of the injured men died in hospital this morning, and the bodies of two men are still missing. Among those who lost their lives were a watchmaker and a pupil belonging to the Central School, the son of one of the employes at the cake-shop. This brings the number of those who died from the fire up to seven.

THE SHAN STATES.

Mr. J. G. Scott, the officiating Superintendent of the Shan States, writes the later history of the Shan States and Sawlapaw, whose career in Upper Burms during the past few years has been of exceptional interest. This is done in his annual administration report, which is not a mere compilation of facts and figures, but can lay claim to some literary originality. Mr. Scott tells us Sawlapaw was a stubborn man from his youth, and when he made the attack on Maukme in March last year he had grown old in the belief that his country was impregnable and his people in their hills invincible. Notwithstanding that he was cruelly undeceived by events, the defeat of his men and their summary expulsion from Maukme did ot discompose him. He rode the high horse and nonchalantly opened negociations with the local Government for the proper working of the timber on which his incorpdepended. Being ordered to evacuate Mautema he replied that he had no quarrel with the P ritish. but with the Maukme Sawbwa, and in his punishment of that Chief desired no British interference. Knowing full well thrat no expedition could be sent against him in the rainy season, he "gratified his ruffled pr' de and opened correspondence on a good lofty platform," hoping to find out what the British intentions were, and beyond this sent a party/to loot and burn the post of Kyankhnyat in Lower Burma. The expedition, whose coler t was to exact from him an indemnity and apology, marched against him in December. Five hundred of his men were met with in the oren on January and, this year, and by way of apralying "moral sussion" to their Chief, about a hundred and lifty of his men were killed, our own loss being five, including a native officer who was thrown from his horse and broke his neck. Sharp skirmishing followed, Sawlon, the capical, was fould to be deserted, and "the overtheow of Sawle paw was as rapid as it was complete." With the capture of Sawlon all bustilities ceased, for Sawlapaw fled into the jungle, bitterly disappointing his subjects and followers, who naturally expected him to make a grand final stand by the Upper Haw, the Royal Palace, which was the residence of his great ancestor, Pa Paw. All the effects he could load on two camels he carried away, with him, leaving. Haw, which tradition described as a capital place to sack, to the tender mercies of his disaffected subjects, who had reduced its coffers to emptiness before the troops arrived. Fearless of the invaders, the people returned, but no tidings could be gained of their Chief. As a matter of fact, small compost parties had severai times been within a mile of him, and his capture might have been effected but for the incapacity of the interpreters. As Sawlapaw refused to come in, he was su perseded | Sawlawi being enthroned in his stead, on signing a document declaring himself to be a subject of the Queen and promising to pay an annual tribute of Rs. 5.000. In addition in this a bond was exacted for the payment of two lakhs of rupees and five hundred muskets and a further sum of one lakh to cover the cost of the expedition, As security for this all the tivaber of the Sawlawi and his sureties were hypothecated. Under the rule of Sawlawi it is a nticipated a prosperous era for Karenni has be en entered upon. The new ruler is a grand-nepitew of Sawlapaw and a man of some thirty-circht years of age. His father was heir-designate, but it appears that he failed to go down to Mandalay in King Thechaw's time, and Sawlawi, who went in his place, was formally proclaimed Kyenimong by the Burmans, his father dying shortly afterwards. The choice seems to be generally approved. The Shan Chiefs in Mandalay believe him more capable to administer East in Karenni than his Predecessor, and Mr. Scott says "Sawlawi, by nature and habits, seems to have been intended for a mere farmer, and hated anything that diverted his attention from the cattle-pen or the plough-shaft." He further says that Sawlapaw was das stubborn as farmers generally are," and gladly allowed Sawiawi to manage internal affairs. The whole story winds up with "All's well that ends well." " The new Chief is no novice: Sawlawi is glad to live a life of less. responsibility and greater freedom, and the Karennis find that under his rule trade is flourishing and greater tranquillity prevails. The only danger the local Government apprehends is that in his enthusiasm for the introduction of perfectly civilized Karennia, who constitute the bulk of his population .- Bombay Gazette.

CHINESE CHARACTERISTICS CONCLUSION.

In speaking as we have done of the defects of Confucianism, we by no means intend to do thought, it is among the most remarkable intellectual achievements of the race. It is true that the western reader cannot escape a feeling that much of what he finds in the Confucian classics is folune. But it is not merely by perusing them that we are to receive our most forcible impressions of what the Chinese classics I are and have been, but by contemplating their effects. Here is the Chinese race, by far the mightiest aggregation of human beings in any one nation on earth, with a written history extending as far back as that of any other which the world has known, the only nation I that has throughout retained its nationality and first appeared," existing, for aught that appears, in much the same way as in heary antiquity. What is the explanation of this unexampled fact? By what means has this incomputable mass of human beings dwelling on the Chinese plains from the dawn of history until now, been pany have announced that the number of work- I to be an exception to the universal law of

have depended upon physical force, the moral phenomena which others, from their Chinese have depended upon moral forces. superior stand-point, dispute. "Well, I would not believe it if I were you, but I have got to !" human duty," says Dr. Legge, "is wonderful and admirable. It is not perfect indeed. But on the last three of the four things which Confucius delighted to teach-'letters, ethics, devotion of soul, and truthfulness'-his utterances are in harmony both with the Law and the Gospel. A world ordered by them would be a beautiful world." The entire freedom of the Chinese classical works from anything which could debase the mind of the readers, is a most important characteristic, which has been often pointed out, licentious descriptions, and from every offensive whole of the Sacred Books and their annotations that may not be read aloud in any family circle in England. Again, in every other non-Christian country, idolatry has been associated with human sac ifices and with the deification of vice, accompanied by licentious rites and orgies. Not a sign of all this exists in China." The direct personal responsibility of the emperor to Heaven for the quality of his rule; the exaltation of the people as of more importance than the ruler: the doctrine that the virtuous and able (hsien neng) should be the rulers, and that their rule must be based upon virtue; the comprehensive theory of the five relations of men to each other; these points have stood out like mountain meaks from the general level of Chinese thought and have attracted the attention of all observers. In closing what we have to say of the Chinese, we wish to place emphasis upon the moral excellencies of the Confucian system, for it is only by putting those excellences in their true light that we can hope to arrive at any just comprehension of the Chinese people, These excellences have made the Chinese pre-eminently amenable to moral forces. The employment of The classical writings in the civil service examinations for successive ages has unified the minds of the people to a marvellous degree, and the powerful motives thus brought into play, leading every candidate for a degree to hope for | than in China.—N. C. Daily News. the stability of the government as a pre-requisite to his own success, has doubtless been a principal factor in the perpetuation of the Chinese people to this present time.

The Confucian Classics are the chart by which the rulers of China have endeavoured to navigate the ship of state. It is the best chart ever constructed by man, and perhaps it is not too much to say, with Dr. Williams, Dr. Legge, and others, that its authors may have had in some sense a divine guidance. With what success the Chinese have navigated their craft, and into what waters they have sailed, in what direction they are at present steering, these are questions of capital importance, now that China is coming into intimate relations with other states, and seems likely in the future to exert an influence increasingly great. It has been said that "there are six indications of the moral life of a community, either of which is significant; when they all agree in their testimony, they afford an infallible test of its true character. These are (1) the condition of industry; (2) the social habits; (3) the position of woman and the character of the family; (4) the organisation of government, and the character of the rulers; (5) the state of public educaon actual life." In the discussion of the various characteristics of the Chinese which have attracted our notice, NOON. each of the foregoing points has been incidensally illustrated, albeit incompletely, and without that observance of proportion necessary in a full treatment of these topics. In a survey of the Chinese character the field of view is so extensive that many subjects must be passed by altogether. The characterjetics which have been selected are intended merely as points through which lines may be drawn to aid in outlining the whole. Every reader will be able to suggest many, additional 'characteristics' which ought to be included in a full presentation of the Chinese as they are. Mr. Meadows, the most philosophical of the many writers on China and the Chinese, expressed the opinion that the best way to convey to the mind of another person a correct idea of the genius of a foreign people, would be to hand him for perusal a collection of notes, formed by carefully recording great numbers of incidents which had attricted one's attention, particularly those that seemed at all extraordinary, together with the explanation of the extraordinary parts, as given by natives of the country. The greater part of the illustrative incidents which have been hereinbefore cited in exemplification of various characteristics of the Chinese, have been mentioned because they "appeared upon examination to be typical. They are like bones of a skeleton which must be fitted into their place before the whole structure can be seen. It will not do to ignore them, unless perhaps it can be shown that they are not bones at all, but merely plaster-of Paris imitations, may indeed be objected that the true place of each separate bone has been mistaken, and that others which are important modifiers of the total result have not been adjusted to their proper places. This criticism, which is a perfectly just one, we not only admit but expressly affirm, declaring that it is not possible to gain a complete idea of the Chinese from selected /characteristics,' any more than it is possible to gain a correct idea of a human countenance from descriptive essays on its eyes, its nose, or its chin. But at the same time, we must again remind the reader that the judgments expressed have not been hastily formed, that they are based upon a mass of observations far in excess of what has been referred to, and that in many cases the opinions might have been made infinitely stronger, and still have been fully warranted by the facts. These facts are as patent to one who comes within their range as a North China dust-storm which fills the eyes, the cars, the nostrils, the hair and the clothing with an almost impalpable powder, often surcharging the atmosphere with electricity, and cometimes rendering lamps necessary at noonday, One may be very wrong in his theory of the causes of this phenomenon, but altogether right in his description of it. But there is this Important difference between the observation of to send in their Bills of Lading for Counter-the decay and death of nations? Those who Middle Ages, and was met by the somewhat have investigated this subject most thoroughly unsympathetic response, "Why, I don't believe, are united in declaring that this result is due that." Her reply had a significance for those to the fact that whereas other nations who have been confronted with disagreeable who knows human nature, can fail to be im pressed to the point of deep awe, with the life are of a contradictory character, and whoever thought of the marvellous restraining power looks upon one f ce of the shield, ignoring the which Chinese morality has exerted upon the other, will infallibly judge erroneously, and yet race from the earliest times until now. "It would | will never come to a percention of the fact that he be hard to over-estimate," says Dr. Williams, is wrong. The union of two apparently irrecon-"the influence of Confucius in his ideal princely | cileable views in one conception is not an easy scholar, and the power for good over his race task but it is often a very necessary one, and nowhich this conception has ever since exerted." where is it more necessity than in China, where it "The immensurable influence in after-ages of the is so difficult to see even one side completely, not character thus portrayed, proves how lofty was to speak of both. In illustration of this proposihis own standard, and the national conscience tion, let us for a moment revert to the subject has ever since assented to the justice of the of Consucianism, judged by the crucial test of portrait." "The teaching of Consucianism on its results. Intellectually it has been the vital principle of the Chinese people, without which they would not have been the Chinese. "The great T'ai Tsung," remarks Dr. Williamson, " the founder of the T'ang dynasty, said that the precepts of the sages were for the Chinese what the water is for the fishes." Confucianism has unified the language, the thought, and the race. It has developed a nation of ke-n intellectual ability, able as we have already remarked to hold their own with any other race now on the planet. We are constantly surprised and and which is in the greatest possible contrast to delighted by the rapidity, accuracy and apparent the literatures of India, Greece, and Rome. "No ease with which some Chinese seem to assimipeople," says Mr. Meadows, " whether of ancient late knowledge, even when cast in foreign or modern times, has porsessed a sacred litera- moulds. They have that penius which is ture so completely exempt as the Chinese from | "infinite cap city for labour," and those staying qualities which enable them to expression. There is not a single sentence in the | win every race. Their education is narrow and inadequate. But still it is education, and enables them to use their minds, the true end of education. The mind of an educated Chinese resembles a steam-engine on railways; it is fitted to its particular track and to no other the moment it leaves this track it is 'ditched' and helpless. But as long as it remains upon that track it moves with an case and a power which is truly wonderful. Nor is this intellectual force confined to those who are educated. As the writer just quoted has truly remarked, it is very common to meet with able men among the coolies. The minds of women in China have been totally neglected for countless ages, the insign ficant exceptions only serving to illustrate the dense darkness which has prevailed. thick darkness that might be felt. Yet many of the ordinary Chinese women have well-balanced and practical minds, and it is a very common phenomenon to find women virtually at the head of the entire establishment, dominating their husbands by sheer superiority of mental ability. The literary examinations of Chi a effer one of the most remarkable phenomena in the intellectual history of mankind, and they are still sometimes cited by western statesmen and writers as indicating the general lines along which civilservice reform ought to proceed among Occidentals. SCOTT'S Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites is especially adapted to all conditions where the tissues are wasting away from inability to digest and assimilate ordinary food. The combined virtues of the Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites produce a marked effect in such cases. They restore the wasted tissues, create an appetite, make new blood, heal the inflammation of the throat and lungs, and increase the Hesh. In short they form the finest combined food and medicine that can be given the invalid. Any Chemist can supply it.—A. S. Watson & Co. (Ltd.), agents in Hongkong and China. -- [Advt.
